SAN DIEGO IS OFFERED THE SAN DIEGUITO WATER SYSTEM FOR $3,750,000

OFFICIALS VIEW PROPOSITION FAVORABLY

Includes Lake Hodges System, Pamo and Sutherland Reservoir Sites, With a Yield of 12,000,000 Gallons of Water Daily

San Diego Tuesday was offered the San Dieguito water system, comprising the Lake Hodges system and the Pamo and Sutherland reservoir sites, capable of yielding 12,000,000 gallons of water daily with proper development, for $3,750,000, of which $500,000 would be payable in cash and the remainder spread over a period of 30 years, with interest at 6 per cent.

The offer was made by John Treanor, manager of the San Dieguito Water company, and includes all properties owned on the San Dieguito river by the company, Griffith Henshaw, the Henshaw Investment company, the San Diego County Water company and John Treanor. It was stated in the offer that the revenue from Lake Hodges water alone would be sufficient to pay the purchase price in the 30 years allowed for payments on the system.

Formal presentation of the offer was made after the proposition had been under discussion between Treanor and the council for some time. The councilmen Tuesday stated that they would check over the offer and if the facts are as they appear on the face of the proposition, the citizens of San Diego would be asked to pass on the matter. Several weeks will be required to check over the engineering data and the figures submitted by Treanor with his offer. If the facts are found to be as presented in Treanor's proposition, the councilmen said they would bend every effort to enable the city to acquire the system.

The San Dieguito system lies along what has been variously called the San Bernardo river, San Dieguito river, San Pasqual creek and Pamo creek, which runs approximately into the ocean just above Del Mar. It has been developed with a dam at a point several miles above its mouth, and this dam creates what is known as Lake Hodges, a reservoir with a capacity of 12,284,200,000 gallons. This dam overflows in winters when the runoff is below normal because it was not designed to conserve all the waters of the stream. At Sutherland and Pamo, dam sites above Hodges, approximately 12,000,000 gallons of water daily may be obtained by construction of dams without interfering with the operation of Lake Hodges. By pumping in the San Pasqual valley 2,000,000 gallons of water also may be obtained, it is said, making the total yield of the system 14,000,000 gallons daily net safe yield.

This additional 2,000,000 gallons, however, cannot be obtained unless riparian owners are bought out and Treanor's offer promised only a net safe yield of 12,000,000 gallons a day.

The San Dieguito water system lies immediately north of the San Diego river watershed and contains some of the choicest watershed land in the county. What is known as the 30-inch rainfall belt extends over the upper end of the system, which means that a good runoff is assured at Sutherland. The Pamo dam site watershed also is in the heavy rainfall belt. San Diego's present water sys- has only a very small area where the annual rainfall is anywhere near 30 inches.

With the presentation of the offer Tuesday informal plans were revealed providing for a dam at Sutherland site and another at San Vicente, above Lakeside and about 15 miles from the Sutherland site. The San Vicente would be more of a storage reservoir than an impounding unit and would be connected with the city by a pipe line. A pipe line would also run from Sutherland to San Vicente, delivering the excess waters of Sutherland to the storage basin of San Vicente to await delivery to the city.

On the face of the proposition submitted by Treanor, San Diego would virtually be getting Sutherland and Pamo dam sites, as well as Lake Hodges, for nothing, as the figures presented show that revenue from the system would pay the purchase price. Lake Hodges itself would yield no additional water to the city beyond the 3,000,000 gallons authorized now under a contract with the San Dieguito Water company, but the offer gives the city two dam sites with very little possibility of litigation such as is holding back development of the San Diego river.

If the city accepts the offer the council has no intention of abandoning the San Diego river, the councilman stated emphatically. But it is apparent that development of the river will be held up by the present litigation, and the immediate needs of the city demand that some water be developed to care for the growing requirements of the city. This is recognized by the council, and the city officers are eager to tie up to any proposition that will mean more water for San Diego.

In this proposal to the city Treanor offers the following properties as parts of the San Dieguito system: Sutherland reservoir site; Pamo reservoir site, Lake Hodges, San Dieguito reservoir (below Lake Hodges), Lockwood Mesa reservoir, the canals and pipe lines connecting these reservoirs, the pipe line leading to the city limits north of Del Mar, and also the company's interest in a pipe line from the city limits to La Jolla, together with certain tracts of land adjoining Lake Hodges. This property consists of about 50 parcels lying below the 395-foot contour above sea level and east of the west line of Rancho San Bernardo.

The company is to deliver engineering data on the reservoir sites, showing that the total water supply controlled by the properties offered will give the city 12,000,000 gallons safe domestic supply after meeting all obligations of present contract holders.

These present consumers, or contract holders, are the Santa Fe irrigation district, San Dieguito irrigation district, Del Mar Water Light & Power company and the city of San Diego. Lake Hodges will have sufficient water, even with the other dams built above, to supply all present contract holders, Treanor declares.

Another possibility for a dam site was discussed by Treanor when he spoke of a "super-Hodges," or a reservoir a short distance above the present dam. This dam site at present is flooded by the waters of Lake Hodges. The dam at Lake Hodges also could be raised, which would result in almost doubling the amount of water impounded.

After the $500,000 cash payment called for in Treanor's offer the city would pay $175,000 the first year if the offer were accepted. The second year's payment would be $185,000, and this payment would increase $10,000 each succeeding year, until the ninth year the city would pay $255,000. Thereafter payments would be at the rate of $255,000 a year. Throughout the life of the contract the city would have the option of taking over the title by paying whatever portion of the purchase price then was outstanding.

Immediately upon entering into a contract with the company the city would be placed in control of the properties although the title would not be passed until the payments were completed.

To accept the proposition the city would have to vote money to make the down payment called for in the proposition. At present the city's bonding margin is ample to take care of the down payment called for and leave a margin of more than $1,000,000 on hand for emergencies.

TRIAL OF HENRY FRATI

The charge of battery against Henry Frati brought by Mr. and Mrs. Geer of Santee was tried before Judge Burtch Tuesday afternoon in the Lakeside town hall. Mrs. Geer summoned for her witnesses Dr. L. J. Knorr, W. O. Sanford, deputy constable, and her husband. Henry Frati, who was not represented by counsel, brought L. O. Arnold, who has a summer home near Vacation camp, as a witness.

The evidence seemed to show that Mrs. Geer was slapped by Frati, her glasses broken and she was thrown to the ground. Her person showed bruises and she was on crutches at the trial. The evidence, however, was not entirely convincing as to the origin of the bruises. The charge, which was "battery," rather than "assault," brought the crime into the misdemeanor class. The judge accordingly fined Frati $60, which he produced at once.

The quarrel occuring as it did with only the two concerned present, resolved itself into a question of veracity. There had been trouble about the care of the goats which belonged to both Frati and to Mrs. Geer. Fault there was, doubtless, on both sides, and the culmination of weeks of controversy occurred June 20th in the quarrel which resulted in the charge of battery against Frati.

BOY SCOUTS

The three boys who were at the camp at Cuyamaca have returned and the regular work of the troops will go on to success or failure according to the interest of the boys. It is to be hoped the good work will continue to occupy the boys and the "one good deed every day" demanded from a "regular Scout" become a habit. The all-night camp last week at El Monte was very successful. It so happened that there were two troops camping there that night besides our own—a troop of boys from Pacific Beach and a troop of Camp Fire Girls from Ocean Beach. The three groups of young people joined together in the outdoor amusements and activities of camp life.

The regular meetings will be held as usual on Monday evening under the care of the scoutmaster, Mr Conrad, at the Community church.

UNION AND TRIBUNE WERE ON OUR SIDE TWELVE YEARS AGO

A great many people in San Diego doubtless think that city has always claimed to own all the waters of the San Diego river and neglected to conserve them all these years simply because they were not needed. In that they are wholly mistaken. The doctrine or claim that the city owns all those waters is a comparatively recent one, invented or first proclaimed about twelve years ago, and at that time it was opposed by the San Diego Union and Tribune as unwise and unjust to the people of the surrounding territory. The claim was an invention of a gang of city politicians and lawyers who conceived the idea, doubtless, that by that means they could gain popular support when seeking office and do a lot of legal business that would otherwise never be secured.

In the issue of the El Cajon Valley News of November 20, 1913, appears the following article from the Tribune. Read it carefully and see how it accords with the later attitude of that paper. Also in the same issue is quoted a longer article from the Union in which it is strongly argued that it would be unjust and unwise to attempt to enforce the claim of the city to the ownership of the waters of the river.

The Tribune article follows:

"There is much wisdom in the argument of Mr. Charles Samson, president of the La Mesa, Lemon Grove and Spring Valley Irrigation District, concerning the proper attitude of the city of San Diego towards the water interests of the city's suburbs.

"The region represented by Mr. Samson will, as he says, eventually be incorporated with the city; and if it is permitted at this time to develop a water system from a source which is, perhaps, legally within the municipal ownership, the value of the district to be annexed will be vastly enhanced; and the amalgamation will be sooner accomplished by reason of the population induced by the water supply.

"Private enterprise in the development of water for irrigating the La Mesa and Lemon Grove region has been woefully and egregiously inadequate. It doesn't matter why these speculators have failed; the fact is painfully evident that they were unable to fulfill their promises or contracts; and the only resource of people who were induced to rely on these promises and contracts is a community effort—which they now ask San Diego to permit them to make at their own expense.

"There should be no hesitation on our part in granting the request.

"Much of the future wealth of San Diego depends on the development of what is called 'the back country'; and this back country can not be developed without water. Even if we look upon the proposition of Mr. Samson in its boldest business aspect and from the most selfish point of view, the profit is very largely for San Diego. What we may give to the people of La Mesa and Lemon Grove now will return to us in due course far more valuable as a community asset than it could ever be through any effort we might make to develop the water supply for our own use.

"Besides, we should concentrate our best efforts upon the conservation of the water supply now owned by the city.

"We have taken over a system that can be developed to supply the needs of this city when it shall have a population of more than half a million; and this development will continue as the needs of the city grow. There is, therefore, no need of the underground water of the San Diego river, and it is not at all likely that the city will ever care to utilize any of the water from this source.

"On the other hand this water is invaluable for the irrigation purposes of San Diego's suburban population. It is desirable, too, that when the immigration through the Panama canal sets in, we shall have a substantial offering within our own corporate limits whereby we may retain some of its population. The certainty of a constant water supply in our suburbs will be sufficient to hold the best of the newcomers for our own citizenship.

"San Diego in this matter should not play the dog in the manger; nor should she with fatuous lack of foresight seek to kill the goose that is sure to lay many golden eggs for her in the not far distant future."

IMPROVEMENTS ARE BEING MADE AT GRANITE WORKS

A large new air compressor is being installed at No. 1 granite quarry on the Eucalyptus ranch and the one that has been in use there is being installed at the polishing shed where the granite blocks are finished and polished for the market.

This polishing work has proceeded slowly for some weeks, principally because the air compressor used there was not of sufficient power to supply the air needed. But one man, A. E. Haddon, has been at work. However, he has turned out a lot of finished blocks. They have been mostly markers or other comparatively small pieces. Some of them have been shipped by truck to various localities and the others are stored. It is the intention to ship a carload of these finished blocks early next month.

With the installation of the new machinery, which will be completed within a week, the work of dressing and polishing the stones can be prosecuted much more rapidly, as additional men can be employed and the air pressure will be sufficient to permit continuous operation of the machinery for dressing and polishing.

The granite business in the Lakeside district is getting bigger and becoming of greater commercial importance all the time.

SUIT SETTLED OUT OF COURT

The suit brought some time ago by Wallace Mansur of Lakeside against the Lakeside Development company has been settled by compromise out of court. By the terms of settlement the company retains the land on which the country club was to have been built and Mr. Mansur receives a substantial sum of money. The investigation which was pending by the state board of incorporation commissioners has been withdrawn.

AN IMPROVEMENT

This week another step has been taken to assure the public clean food that shall be wholesome at all times, even though one of the most perishable kind if not properly cared for.

It seems to be agreed that ice cream is one of the most nourishing foods in summer and the most palatable as well. Wet dirt, and often the flavor of salt, has grown to be expected, sometimes in connection with ice cream, but with the advent of one more use of electrivity even in the little town of Lakeside we will have our cream clean and hard. A week or so ago we spoke of the installation, by one of the dealers, of an electric system of cooling, and this week we are glad to say another fine Serv-el has been installed. The Park store put in a six-can cabinet made to their special order, which also includes a compartment for making ice. The motors which automatically control this machine are all in a rear room, where they can not annoy customers by their noise or vibration. Four flavors of cream are to be kept and 22-ounce cartons packed for outside eating are filled and kept in one of the icy containers all the time. This is not the only kind of refrigeration possible with electricity and the kind which is of most interest to housekeepers is also in use at the Park store, namely the kind which keeps an ordinary refrigerator cool. In a refrigerator so cooled is kept all the bottled goods and milk, and the average housewife sighs with longing when she sees how clean and cool the whole refrigerator is.

Those who know are freely prophesying the passing of the ice cart with its dirt and annoyance, and the general use of the clean, easy systems which will soon be available to the ordinary householder at moderate cost and maximum convenience.

LOCAL POULTRYMEN TO TAKE FOUR-DAY JAUNT UP-STATE

Poultrymen who can spare the time from their ranches for a short period and have a desire to improve and further their poultry knowledge should not fail to immediately send in their names to insure the success of a traveling poultry conference being planned by the poultry departments of the Mt. Helix and El Cajon Farm Bureau centers.

It is a splendid opportunity to visit their neighbors to the north and to ascertain what they are doing and how they are doing it. Poultrymen and farmers who have done this sort of thing in the past are unanimous in saying that it is the best method of "soaking up" knowledge of methods of handling, contrivances and appliances of outstanding merit.

The present plans call for a departure from San Diego early Monday morning, August 3rd, with the first stop at Tustin. The afternoon will be spent visiting hatcheries, poultry breeding farms and commercial egg ranches between Tustin and Santa Ana, spending Monday night in Santa Ana.

Leaving Santa Ana early Tuesday morning, we will go to Long Beach, to Wilmington, to Gardena and on to Los Angeles, where we will stay Tuesday night. On this day's trip, among other interesting places, we will take in the poultry farms of M. A. Schofield, George England and F. M. Molby.

Wednesday morning we will pay a hurried visit to the warehouse of the Poultry Producers of Southern California and the P. C. A., after which we will head for Pomona by way of Arcadia. Stops will be made at intervals and at Pomona we will visit, among other places, the Southern California Farm bureau egg laying contest. Wednesday night will be spent in Pomona.

Leaving Pomona Thursday morning, we will head for Riverside, taking in, among other places, the Chaffee Union Trap Nest station and the Fontana Farms. From Riverside we will start for San Diego via the inland route, arriving home some time in the late afternoon on Thursday. We will be gone four days and three nights.

In order to make the trip as inexpensive as possible, it is intended that those of our party who have the larger cars, make up their own parties so that each car will have a full quota of passengers, allowing, of course, for personal baggage. It will also be understood that a price per mile be agreed on and that each passenger pay his proportionate share of the expense of operating the car. Hotel bills will probably average $2.50 per night, and of course the cost of meals can be regulated by yourself.

Arrangements are being made through the courtesy of our local farm advisor, Mr. France, for competent guides, thoroughly familiar with the territory to be traversed.

You will understand that in order to execute a trip of this kind successfully and with despatch, it will be necessary that each member of the party follow the leader throughout. The itinerary has been made up with the idea in mind of giving everyone an ample opportunity of seeing the things he is particularly interested in with a lot of other good things thrown in. We will all have to be considerate and unselfish and realize that we all have different ideas of the importance of things. If you can not and will not co-operate in making this the success educationally that the promoters want to make it, please do not go, for we are sure you will not enjoy it, and we are doubly sure that we will not.

Please write or telephone immediately to W. L. Houghton, La Mesa; A. R. Hunter, El Cajon, or J. G. France, county farm advisor, for further information or enrollment as a member of the party. In writing advise us whether you will drive your own car, whether you have made arrangements for transportation or whether you want us to arrange it for you. Do not wait for a personal invitation, as there are none being sent out. Everyone is welcome.

A. R. Hunter.

MURDER OR FATAL ACCIDENT AT RANCHO DEL RIO, SANTEE, SUNDAY EVENING, JULY 19TH

MRS. MARCELINA JOBIN INSTANTLY KILLED

Jesus Martinez, Youth of 18, Held in Jail on Murder Charge—Claims Killing Caused By Accidental Discharge of Rifle.

Mrs. Marcelina Jobin, aged about 31 years and the wife of Pedro Jobin, was shot and killed between 7 and 8 o'clock last Sunday evening on the place known as Rancho del Rio near Santee by a youth aged about 18 years by the name of Jesus Martinez. The tragedy occurred in a small tent house on the ranch, and the only witness to it except Martinez was Micaela, the little six-year-old daughter of the Jobins.

Coroner Kelly was called at once and examined the little girl as to what occurred in the tent house. She is reported to have said that her mother and Martinez had quarreled violently and she had heard her mother say, "Shoot me, then," or use words to that effect. This report led to the assumption that this was a triangle case and there had been illicit relations between Martinez and the woman, or at least that he had illicit designs toward her.

Martinez immediately fled after the killing and remained in hiding in the cornfields and the brush of the San Diego river in the immediate vicinity of the ranch until about 9 o'clock Tuesday morning, when he made his appearance at the ranch house and was taken into custody and lodged in jail on a murder charge.

The remains of Mrs. Jobin were taken to the Merkley undertaking parlors, where, it was announced, an inquest would be held this week.

The fatal shot was fired from a 22-caliber automatic Winchester rifle which was the property of Jobin. Martinez had several times borrowed it for the purpose of hunting rabbits on and about the place and had been using it for that purpose Sunday evening.

Both men were employed on the ranch, Martinez only for a few days and Jobin for some time as night irrigator. His home was in San Diego and his wife and child were spending the day with him at the ranch. Martinez is said to live on Sisson avenue near University, in San Diego.

So far as any one employed on the place knew, the relations between the Jobin family and Martinez were most friendly and there was no suspicion of trouble. Just what happened in the tent house before the fatal shooting will probably never be fully known, as the testimony of a child so young will probably not include all the incidents. Her story so far as made public would seem to incriminate the youth, but he maintains that the weapon was fired accidentally. One of the men employed there says that in endeavoring to unload the weapon in the presence of the coroner later, it was accidentally discharged, the bullet entering the ground. This gives color to the claim of the youth and indicates that it might have been an accidental shot that killed the woman.

When taken into custody Martinez was incoherent and evidently badly scared. He said, however, that he was so frightened at what he had done that he at once fled in fear of Jobin. He had then lurked in the vicinity, hiding in the fields and brush while the deputies from the sheriff's office had scoured the country in search of him, and had given up and returned to the ranch because he was almost starved, having had nothing to eat since Sunday evening.

The bullet entered Mrs. Jobin's right breast an inch or two below the collar-bone, causing almost instant death. Jobin is quoted by the dailies as having no knowledge or suspicion of any improper relations between his wife and Martinez.

Rancho del Rio is located a short distance northeast of the Standard Oil company's station east of Santee and the house stands a few rods back from the paved county road. The place is operated as a dairy ranch and about 115 cows are now being milked there. Besides the ranch house proper there are a number of smaller houses for the accommodation of the employes on the place and the tent house in which the tragedy occurred stands in a row with others.

WILLIAM H. LEARD

William H. Leard, who was at one time a resident of Lakeside, and has lately resided in San Diego, succumbed to a long illness last week. Mr. Leard had a stroke of paralysis shortly after leaving Lakeside and his throat became numb and powerless. It was necessary to feed him liquid nourishment and his vigor decreased from day to day. He died at his home in San Diego the 16th and was buried last Saturday afternoon from the Bradley-Woolman parlors in San Diego at 2 o'clock. The service was in charge of Rev. Richardson of El Cajon. Mr. Richardson had been a friend of Mr. Leard's for 25 years, having been his pastor in Great Falls, Montana.

Mr. Leard leaves a wife and one son, Frank Leard, who is in the real estate business in San Diego.

Many Lakeside friends paid their respects to him at the funeral and the flowers were most profuse and beautiful.

THAT SCOPES BUSINESS

Three important facts stand out as a result of that serious sideshow recently enacted at Dayton, Tennessee:

That under the constitution of the United States any citizen thereof may hold whatever religious views he pleases, be they orthodox, Protestant, Buddhistic, Mohammedan, agnostic, atheistic, evolutionary, or what-not. This fact is about 150 years old, but we keep forgetting it every day. The Pilgrim fathers forgot it almost as soon as they established themselves here, when they started burning witches. The Ku Klux Klan forgot it recently, and Tennessee certainly forgot it when she passed that law.

That the state of Tennessee now has on its statutes a law that is unconstitutional, in that it expressly discriminates against one religious theory; that, under the constitution, Tennessee has no more right to say that evolution shall not be taught in its public schools, than it has to say that no religion shall be taught, or that the Christian religion only, or the Catholic or Protestant versions of it, shall be taught; hence Tennessee has no right to attempt in any way to compulsorily steer its future citizens into any certain manner of worship; that is a matter of the free will and choice of the individual, and not to be tampered with, especially in the age of adolescence. The doctrine, "Go forth unto all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature," is not to be interpreted, according to our constitution, as go forth unto all the world, and make every creature believe as you do. Preach and exhort, yes; but refrain from the employment of "high pressure" methods by means of statutes. The ideal method of instruction in religion is of course that employed in our state universities today, offering courses in all of these religions to the student, with all of them optional. Let the student pick and choose.

Thirdly, that all of us are more or less bigots. We all have bigoted tendencies which must be constantly fought to become good citizens. Bryan is a bigot for upholding the Tennessee law, and much more a bigot for attempting to cram the Bible, as it is, down the throat of the American public. The evolutionists are bigots should they attempt to secure laws in any of the states compelling the teaching of that theory in the public schools. Tennesseeans are bigoted in decreeing that it shall not be taught in their public schools. We are all bigoted at times, forever trying to make our neighbor believe as we do about this and about that by bringing "influence" to bear on him, and "forcing" him to change his mind.

Tolerance is the cure-all for the country and the times, and should be practised occasionally by its people in their social relations, if for no other reason than to see how well it works. If we could only listen to the other fellow's opinion; grant first that he has one; let him express it; then, if we must, disagree absolutely, but without vilification and condemnation for his presuming to have it; what a happy country this would be. Although we seldom profit by it, there is a wealth of instruction in the words of Voltaire: "I disagree utterly with what you say, but will defend to the death you're right to say it."

JUDGE SLOANE GIVES COUNCIL ADVICE

In a communication to the Union of last Sunday, Judge W. A. Sloane, former member of the state supreme court, gives the San Diego city council the following sound advice:

The Union has given a great deal of valuable space in the past months to statements of the city council's side of the San Diego river water controversy. You must be aware of the fact that thousands of your readers, probably a majority of them, including large numbers of heavy taxpayers and leading business men of the city, are thoroughly tired of the council's program of obstruction, procrastination and seemingly endless litigation. Will you give space to a letter which I think fairly presents the attitude of this element?

Everybody concedes that the most vital issue in the affairs of San Diego is water, and still more water. Water for the present generation, for the immediate future, for a San Diego of 200,000 or 300,000 people in the next 10 years; not water for a visionary metropolis of a million or more people seen in the pipe dreams of real estate speculators and boom propagandists. By the time these speculative dreams show promise of fulfillment, means will be devised for bringing the waters of the Colorado river through the mountains or extracting a fresh water supply from the Pacific ocean. As well speculate on one side of this problem as the other.

It is all right to look ahead even for coming generations, but we do not want to see our present development and that of the near future perish from the earth while we are dreaming of some far-off Utopia.

There is water enough produced from the watershed of the San Diego river and its tributaries, if properly stored and conserved, to supply the few thousand acres of adjacent country with reasonable irrigation and at the same time practically double the water resources of San Diego city; in other words, to supply a city of three times our present population. In the meantime, any water conceded to the irrigation district is not lost as an asset to San Diego's growth and development. Every gallon of water devoted to the lands of La Mesa, El Cajon and Lakeside is worth as much to San Diego's future as a like quantity spread on a San Diego lawn or used in a San Diego factory.

This is true not only as to direct results, but San Diego is a tourist city, and we suffer in comparison with our neighbors to the north by reason of the relative bareness of our back country. Moreover, the present policy is breeding a spirit of hostility to San Diego among the people of the country towns and districts which is bound to react on our growth and business patronage. In any event, if this city attains the growth that is anticipated by the water monopolists, most of the territory of the irrigation district will doubtless have been annexed to San Diego before that time, and the water used for irrigation converted to ordinary domestic use.

The attitude of the city council toward the claims of the La Mesa, Lemon Grove and Spring Valley irrigation district is that of the greedy dog who is willing to risk the loss of a juicy morsel already between its teeth in order to deprive another of a likely-looking bone. This water fight has already consumed years in its preliminary skirmishes, but we have had the repeated assurances of the public officials, through the newspapers, that as soon as they could get into court on the merits of their claims it would be all over but collecting the costs from the defeated defendants. What has been the results of the first real battle? A verdict of $600,000 against the city for the tract of land which it was sought to condemn for reservoir purposes, and which it is insisted by the city is not worth $10,000. Assuming that this verdict is excessive, it all the more impressively shows what a jury of disinterested citizens of a sister county thinks of San Diego's attempt to grab everything in sight pertaining to water development. And even if a satisfactory valuation for the El Capitan dam site had been reached, the court has not yet determined that the city is entitled to a judgment condemning the land before the question of priority of water rights has been first fought out in the courts.

Even if a new trial in this case should be granted by Judge Conkling, it would mean an appeal to the supreme court and probably another two years before this preliminary question is settled. It is a safe prediction that the city of San Diego has embarked in a course of litigation over a doubtful claim to an exclusive right to all the waters of the San Diego river which, if persisted in, will block the development of the water supply of the San Diego river for another five or 10 years.

I am not going into a discussion of the legal merits of the city's claim. It is sufficient to say that at best it is a technical and ancient claim of right based upon a blanket grant of the king of Spain to certain pueblo settlements of the right to the water of the streams on which they were located. No one pretends that there is any equity or justice in such claim in the present instance. After upwards of a hundred years the city of San Diego had appropriated or made use of only a trifling quantity of the water of the San Diego river. The territory of California had long since passed from the jurisdiction of Spain and Mexico to the United States. Public utility interests under the laws of California had appropriated and expended large sums in putting to beneficial use large quantities of this water; settlers had located and made their improvements along the stream, town and communities had sprung up, relying on the use of this water for irrigation and domestic purposes, before the city authorities had unearthed this musty edict of an extinct dynasty. The whole theory of the claim is so opposed to the doctrines of water rights in the United States and under the laws of California, and to the accepted theory that all the inhabitants of a territory within the watershed of a given stream are in fairness and equity entitled to the first claim upon its waters, that I do not believe the courts of last resort will ever sanc-

A HOME CONCERN

A business magazine has this to say about Chain Stores:

"The most crying need of the times is for reduction in the costs of distribution, and this the chain store most certainly accomplishes. Because of large buying power, elimination of middleman's profit, cash sales, standardization of merchandise, rapid turnover and centralized management, CHAIN STORES MAY CUT IN HALF THE DISTRIBUTION COST OF THE AVERAGE INDIVIDUAL RETAIL STORE."

. . . figures substantiating this statement have been given by the Harvard Analysis.

Quality First . . . at Heller's

Heller prices are low. We bend every effort to make them as low as possible. But we believe that HIGH QUALITY is the first essential, and that the general public would rather pay a FAIR price for first grade products than pay "bargain" prices for goods of questionable quality. Consequently we buy nothing but merchandise that we absolutely KNOW is first grade, and we ask that you will bear this in mind when considering the price question of groceries and foodstuffs.

Our prices are low simply and solely because of the fact that we buy in enormous quantities and for the many other reasons that make it possible for us to do business at a minimum expense. We maintain no delivery system, we sell for cash, which eliminates bad debts, and we have reduced the cost of distribution to a minimum.

A 100% Home Industry

Heller's is and always has been a San Diego concern. This business was founded in 1892 by M. F. Heller, a San Diegan. Not one penny of outside capital has ever gone to develop the business, and no Heller store is maintained outside of San Diego county.

KEROSENE WATER HEATER

There is a general impression that a water heater in a home is an expensive luxury which only the few can afford. Such is not the case. By means of the Perfection a complete outfit for the home can be installed for about $50. The heater burns kerosene and is as effective and economic in operation as a gas heater.

If you have no heater, or are depending upon a solar heater, which supplies hot water except when you need it most and then utterly fails, see us and let us give you a demonstration.

Mrs. Ray Gavin, Mrs. Wallace Mansur, and Miss Emma Mansur who spent several days at Mission Beach last week, returned to Lakeside Sunday evening. The party had a most enjoyable time and will repeat the trip later in the season.

Mrs. Fred Prindle received a message Sunday evening that her father, Mr. Swanson, was very ill at his home in Kingsburg. Mrs. Prindle left at once. Word was received Wednesday that her father passed away Tuesday evening.

Mrs. I. L. Blucher, who was at Warner Springs for treatment, will return there on Sunday. She will not be accompanied by her son, Kenneth, who will spend a part of his time at his aunt's home in San Diego during his mother's absence.

Joe Sargent from Los Angeles is visiting at the home of his aunt, Mrs. Joseph Foster. Mr. Sargent has not been in this locality for many years and enjoyed the various trips throughout the back country he was able to take. He returned to Los Angeles early in the week.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Stafford entertained Sunday with a large party of relatives and friends from Oceanside and Escondido. Mrs. Smith and her grandson, Harvey Frost, from Escondido, and Miss Elizabeth Hollman from Santa Fe, New Mexico, are house guests at the Stafford home.

Lieut. Marvin McCray, who came to Ha-hana the 18th of this month, will make a stay of two weeks. The shore leave of our navy men is always in the nature of a honeymoon with the dear home folks, from whom they are separated for such long periods.

Mrs. Jessie Wright and daughter, Mildred, are planning the move which they expect soon to make to their new home in Riverside. Mrs. Wright is under contract with the city school system of Riverside and will teach in that city, though the particular school is not yet decided by the school superintendent.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Morales are mourning the loss of their little daughter, Josephine, who died last Sunday. Little Josephine was not yet three years old and her death was caused by some form of intestinal cholera. She was buried Tuesday at 2 o'clock. Many Lakeside friends were present at the funeral.

Kenneth Birchard, who is well known locally as a one-time resident of Lakeside, was quietly married a short time ago. His bride is Miss Weltha Dougherty of Ocean Beach. Mr. and Mrs. Birchard are at present living with Mr. Birchard's parents, but plans for a separate home are being laid.

G. W. Conrad of Riverview Farms received a telegram Monday of the very grave illness of his mother in Glendale. He hastened to her side, but was unable to make such connections as would get him to Glendale in season. Mrs. Conrad passed away at 5:15 the same day. Mrs. Conrad's body was brought to San Diego for interment and she was buried in Greenwood cemetery, where she had planned to lie. The services were by Rev. Alfred O. Elliott from the Johnson-Saum undertakers' parlors. Many Lakeside friends of Mr. Conrad attended.

The maternity hospital under the care of Mrs. R. B. Kanady has had quite a busy week. Two baby boys came to Lakeside Thursday afternoon and the help of Mrs. Kanady's daughter, Mrs. Goodman of San Diego, and Mrs. Carlton, a chiropractor from San Diego, were most welcome to the capable manager, Mrs. Kanady.

Captain Smith, who is well known in Lakeside and whose name is associated in the records of the earlier development of the place, was in town Tuesday. Captain Smith is now about 84 years of age, but is hale and hearty and is interested in everything for the well being of his neighbors. He was an interested spectator at the Frati trial.

Mrs. Gertrude Dillon, who is to be one of the new teachers in the Lakeside union grammar school for the coming year, will live, together with her young son, in the McClain cottage on Main street, a short distance from the school building. Mrs. Dillon is at present in the Ray Gavin cottage, but expects to move the first of August.

On Friday evening last a jolly party of young people spent the evening at Mission Beach. The new roller coaster was thoroughly tried out and voted good fun. The party consisted of Misses Dorothy MacGillivray, Grace and Mary Bickell, and Elinor Rumsey, and Messrs. Floyd and Donald MacGillivray, John Rumsey and William Darling.

A card was recently received by Mrs. Jessie Wright, 3670 Stockton street, San Diego, announcing the birth of a daughter, July 9th, to Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Young. Mrs. Young will be remembered as one of the teachers in the union grammar school, Miss Azalia Lyster by name. The little daughter is named Barbara Ruth.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Gavin were surprised to find on their return from Mission Beach Sunday evening that Mrs. Gavin's brother and his family from Whittier were in Lakeside. They are Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Moffett and two daughters, Barbara and Mary Fay, Jr. Mr. and Mrs. Moffett stayed until Monday evening, but the young ladies will remain as guests of their aunt, Mrs. Gavin, for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Philbrook are very happy over the arrival of a fine 9½-pound boy. Stephen Knight came to Philbrook's home last Friday evening at 8:30 and was heartily welcomed by his parents and brothers and sisters. Dr. Knox of El Cajon and Mrs. Louis Melville of El Monte also were on hand to welcome the youngster. Stephen is named for his father's uncle, who lives in Denver.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Mansur Monday of this week purchased the house and lot at the rear of Eugene Hyatt's house and facing River street, opposite the property of Stanley Wood. The property was purchased from Mr. James Ames and the consideration was not stated. Mr. and Mrs. Mansur expect to move into their new home soon and will make many improvements.

The directors of the Lakeside water district are practically marking time while awaiting the action of the state engineering department. The bids received for doing the work were forwarded to that department three weeks ago, but they had not been returned and no authorization to enter into any contract had been received Thursday. As no definite contract can be made before it is authorized by this department, matters are practically at a standstill, although a little work has been done.

Mrs. Lester Westcott gave a reception at her home Wednesday honoring Mrs. Jessie Wright, who was a teacher in the grammar school last year and soon will be moving to Riverside to make her next home. Only the intimate friends of Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Westcott were present and many expressions of sorrow at the loss of so fine a teacher and dear a friend were expressed. Mrs. Wright has taught in our schools for several years and the best wishes of those with whom she has come in contact, both in the community and the schools, go with her to her new home.

The meeting of the Sunshine club Wednesday afternoon was very well attended. The principal business of the meeting was a nursing class conducted by Mrs. Byron Conrad and Miss Mabel Newcomb. By actual demonstration it was shown how to handle illness in the home in approved hospital style. The girls were much interested in the instruction given and proved very apt pupils. After the business of the day was finished a very special treat was provided by the losers in a contest conducted by the girls' junior and intermediate classes in the Sunday school. The delicious ice cream and cake they had prepared for the winning side was greatly appreciated by everybody.

A postal card dated July 18th was received recently from Mrs. George Nelson, who is the guest of the Harry Scidmores on a motoring trip to Rogue river, Oregon. Mrs. Nelson speaks of the "club grove" being located at Dyerville and sends the information that the trees are inscribed. "Lakeside Woman's club contributed money for the preservation of one of these trees," and it must have been interesting to Mrs. Nelson, as it is to us at home. to hear of it, to find the inscribed tree which was our own. Mrs. Nelson spoke enthusiastically of the enjoyable trip and said the party would go to Oregon Caves and to Crater Lakes before starting home.

tion this claim of the city of San Diego to the exclusion of other communities within the watershed of the river.

Suggests Initiative

But whatever the technical legal answer to this question might ultimately be, many of us feel very deeply that it is a question of public policy and business expediency which should be determined on business principles and with a view to doing justice to all parties concerned, and be determined now. Such a settlement under the advice and concurrence of the state railroad commission had been reached and tentatively agreed upon several months ago between representatives of the city administration, the Cuyamaca Water company and the irrigation district, when the city council suddenly called off negotiations and announced its intention to reject all compromises and fight the matter out in the courts. We have all noticed the progress that has been made in the first decisive battle.

This is a public issue, of far-reaching importance, and it is time for the people to take a hand in its solution. Fortunately they are not without adequate means of expression. It is a legislative question and can be covered by an initiative ordinance, submitted to a vote of the people, and—if the members of the council are not responsive to the expressed will of the people—there is always the recall.

I have hesitated to obtrude my personality in this discussion, because while not actively participating in the pending litigation, I have been employed as counsel in some branches of the controversy. I notice, however, that there has been an apparent reluctance on the part of the legal representatives of the city to get their side of the matter exploited through the public press. I do not pretend to be a disinterested party from the standpoint of a lawyer, but I am writing this as a citizen and taxpayer. I have taken an active part in the public affairs of San Diego for nearly 40 years, without financial benefit to myself, so far as anybody could notice it; and when I have felt that something should be said I have not hesitated to say it, in the absence of a better advocate. I believe I am voicing the sentiment of a large majority of the people of San Diego in declaring that the time has come for the people of this city in their sovereign capacity to take up this water question, and determine how it shall be settled, irrespective of the avowed policy of members of the city council.

BACON TELLS ABOUT BOULDER DAM

At the county Farm Bureau picnic at Ramona Wednesday, July 22, Mayor John L. Bacon made a 30-minute speech on the Boulder dam project that was filled with information for all the people. It was one of the most informative and enlightening short talks ever heard in this section. A lot of people who have never been much interested in this great enterprise were impressed and reminded of their duty as citizens and voters in the matter.

And now since they realize the tremendous importance of the project to the people of all Southern California, what should they do about it? How can they help along? What practical thing is there that they can do?

Just this: They can support for national representatives candidates who they know are sound on that great question. The time for demanding more investigation and information and otherwise stalling for time for delay in this great project is past. The people can't be fooled by that trick any longer. Any California member of congress, either in senate or house, who has at this late day not made up his mind which side he is on, who is not sure where he stands, and has not identified himself actively and aggressively as a supporter of the Boulder project, is misrepresenting his constituents and should not be allowed to continue to do so. The matter has reached a stage where there is no longer any middle ground to occupy. It is a question of all the people against the power trust and Mexican land owners, and any representative who is not openly and actively on the side of the people is in the pay of and controlled by the power trust and Mexican land owners. That is all there is to it.

Therefore the duty of every citizen is perfectly plain. It is to support at the next primary election the men who have been actively identified with the Boulder project and who they know they can trust in the matter. Let politics go hang and make loyalty to this project the test. In that way every man and woman can get in effective work for the greatest thing for Southern California that was ever known.

On the A. W. Johnson ranch in Lakeside Farms the J. H. Hale peaches are just getting their color and will be ready for market in about ten days. There are about 400 trees of this variety in the orchard and most of them are fairly well loaded. This is one year when a part of the trees were thinned a little too closely and might have ripened a somewhat larger crop than was left for them. But the fruit is practically all of the finest kind, weighing approximately a pound each, and will all sell for about 10 cents per pound. Probably the average yield per tree will be about $5. All the trees are wired in order to support the branches with their load of fruit, and in addition to these supports wooden braces have been put under about a hundred of those which are most heavily laden. Other and later varieties will ripen soon after the Hales are gone.

DAVID STARR JORDAN NOT A FUNDAMENTALIST

Palo Alto, Cal., July 18.—Opinions or the efforts of one Bryan or ten millions will make no difference with the progress of science.

Truth is not settled by jury trials or a majority of votes.

The Dayton Tenn., affair has two evil sides.

To represent Christianty as bound up in abysmal ignorance or in venerable traditions of good men who had no instruments or methods of precision, drives thousands of sincere people, especially students, away from the church instead of using churches as means for a better life.

Statutes limiting reading or research would make it impossible for an honest man to teach in states affected.

A nation-wide movement for ignorance might be edifying, and certainly would educate the man on the street.

Evolution and nature are identical.

Evolution means orderly change in a universe infinitely expanded in which love is a force as great as gravitation, and all forces equally divine. The infinite universe demands an infinite God, not a petty tribal diety, scheming to manage and to save a few of his creatures.

No true evolutionist can be an atheist nor yet a sectarian.

Scientific men see God in the large as he should be seen and hence are the real defenders of the faith—faith in the soundness at the heart of the universe—the only faith that can endure.

The result of the farcical trial has no great significance. It is a test of the degree of local bigotry and of the validity of a universal law.

It is a matter of regret that science should be defended by an advocate better known as a skilfull casuist than as an apostle of truth.

But the same ground has been fought over again and again ever since the followers of Luther insisted that the Bible is one solid book, every line of it inspired and intended to give, not merely spiritual ideals of various great men, but also historical truths in small doses, its casual statements not to be questioned or even verified by ages to come.

This is paganism revived and the teachings of Jesus discredited.

Mrs. Catt says war can be talked to death. If that is true, Mrs. Catt has her mission in this world, and there is no reason why she should not proceed.—Houston Post-Dispatch.
